In the good days, long before the flood, Noah used to be quite a sport, in fact he ran a full fledged atheletic club, and staged amateur fights for the animals.

Of course Noah himself was the center of attraction. He steps right out and does an exhibition of fast and furious shadow boxing, a playful elephant stops the old boy a few times in the midst of his struggle and knocks him flat, but theres no stopping Kid Noah, he is right up and stepping again.

Then there is a short preliminery bout in which two blows are struck. After that comes the big bout Kid Noah and a prize gorilla, Noah gets the best of the battle for a while, then the gorilla makes just one little playful pass and Kid Noah doubles up for the count of forty seven. He sees dancing girls, air castles, and all of that. The moral: "There's no fool like an old fool"
